6 reasons SELENA GOMEZ Inspires us!

3 SHE'S PROUD OF HER HERITAGE!

Mexican-American Sel released an EP, Revelacion, entirely in Spanish, and encourages her fans to be proud of where they come from.

2 SHE'S MULTI-TALENTED!

- Acting
- Singing
- Producing
- Presenting

Is there anything this woman can't do?

1 SHE'S A COMEDY QUEEN

As Alex in Wizards of Waverley Place, she always had us in stitches, and IRL Selena's never afraid to be her silly self.

Go ahead and Do It!

I want to be able to tell my story!

4

SHE CHAMPIONS MENTAL HEALTH

Always open about her struggles with depression and anxiety, she released a documentary called My Mind and Me to show others they're not alone!

5

HER FRIENDS MEAN THE WORLD TO HER!

Our friendship is Rare!

She and Taylor Swift have been besties for over a decade, sharing secrets with each other. Sel even starred in Tay's Bad Blood music video!

6

SHE'S A GREAT ROLE MODEL!

Selena has always used her fame for good, whether it's talking at the White House about mental health or advocating for vulnerable children in her role as a UNICEF Goodwill Ambassador.

Fun Fact! SELENA'S FIRST ACTING JOB WAS IN BARNEY & FRIENDS IN 2002!

Fun Fact! SHE HOSTS A COOKING SHOW CALLED SELENA + CHEF!

Get reading, demigod!

Whether it's your fave mag or something from a toppling to-be-read pile, pick something that'll capture your attention. Why not start with a book series that's about to get a TV adaptation, like Percy Jackson and the Olympians...

MAKE A SCRAPBOOK

Capture memories in a way completely unique to you! You only need some photos and a plain paper book to get going, then you can go wild with decorations, using your fave pages of 100% Wow, ribbons, stickers and gel pens!

DIGITAL Detox TIPS!

FOLLOW OUR FIVE WAYS TO UNPLUG AND FIND FUN OFFLINE.

SCREEN-FREE SPORTS

Playing sports is a great way to step away from screens, work as a team with your friends and soak in that glorious vitamin D if you play outside. No matter how large your group, you'll be surprised how much fun you can have with just a ball and some green space.

BOREDOM-BUSTER BOARDGAMES

There are lots of fun board games besides Monopoly that are imaginative, silly and could take all day. See what you can find buried in a cupboard, or try playing a celeb-themed Guess Who with your besties, or charades where you have to act out different emojis.

INTO THE Science...

The blue light that screens give off stops your body from producing melatonin, the hormone that makes you feel sleepy. The more time you spend away from screens in the evening, the easier you'll find it to get a good night's sleep!

CHALLENGE TIME

Create a game with your friends of who can stay away from screens the longest. Host a hang out to apply all these tips and feel closer to your besties.

Running

THE WEATHER IS CRISP, THE WIND IS IN YOUR HAIR AND YOU FEEL UNSTOPPABLE, WHAT'S NOT TO LOVE?

Lace up your trainers and get going.

I'm running up that hill!

Start Slow

It's easy to want to go from 0 to 100, but you won't be able to keep that pace for long before you get tired. Ease yourself into running by setting a slow pace. Gradually get faster or keep things slow until you feel more comfortable.

Tempo Trouble?

If it's hard to set a consistent pace, try making a playlist of songs with a great beat you can match. When that killer chorus kicks in, it could give you the boost of energy you need to keep going.

Wonder Warm Ups

It's important to stretch before you run to increase the blood flow to your muscles. Focus on your legs first, working up from your ankles to your hips. Hold each stretch for twenty seconds and you'll be ready to go.

DO YOU LIKE RUNNING? SEND US A PIC!

SCAN ME!

Just scan the code with your phone camera and fill out the form.

Be Sure to Breathe

Try and keep your breathing under control as you run. As your heart rate increases and you use more energy, you'll need more oxygen so focus on deep breaths. You might find breathing through your mouth easier!

FUN FACT

Dina Asher-Smith won gold in the 100m race at the 2014 Junior Athletics Championships when she was only 17! She ran it in just over 11 seconds.

ALL FOUR QUARTERS of the MOON

SHIRLEY MARR

Ah Ma pressed the pastry and the filling into the wooden moulds and Peijing watched as the mooncakes tumbled out, perfectly shaped and imprinted with mysterious designs on the top.

“What about these designs? What do they mean?” Peijing asked, tracing the top of the mooncakes with her finger before hiding her hand behind her back.

“That I don’t know. These meanings have been lost in time. That symbol is so old that even someone as ancient as me can’t understand it.” Ah Ma chuckled and dabbed the pastry with an egg wash. “It is from before the first written language, when our ancestors used to pass stories from mouth to ear and try to hold them safe inside symbols. Stories would stay for eight thousand years, then stories would fade.”

Peijing had been learning about the universe at school – the Big Bang, the first stars, the first single-celled life – and she knew, in the scheme of things, eight thousand years was just a blink of an eye. She was worried that this precise moment would disappear and would never come back again.

“But as the old saying goes,” continued Ah Ma, “the palest ink is better than the best memory.”

A written story could last for ever. Peijing wasn’t very good at writing her feelings down and she worried about that.

As the mooncakes baked away, Biju suddenly made her grand entrance into the kitchen, plum sauce from the duck she had eaten for mid-autumn dinner still around her mouth, her clothes smelling like firecrackers.

“I want one of those,” she said loudly, peering through the glass into the oven.

She did not say please. Manners were also very important to the Guos. As the eldest daughter, Peijing was a mirror; a reflection of her mother. So she was always careful about how she behaved. As her younger sister, Biju was a reflection of Peijing.

Well, supposed to be, anyway. Peijing pressed her lips together and sighed.

“Then you’ve arrived just in time.” Ah Ma smiled. She didn’t mention anything about Biju not saying please. She pulled the hot rack out of the oven with a dishcloth.

Peijing looked at all the perfectly baked mooncakes in wonder and she felt golden and magical. Biju placed her arms around Ah Ma and sank her face into Ah Ma’s apron. Peijing wished she was still small enough to do the same.

“Let’s see how they turned out.” Ah Ma placed one on the cutting board and fetched a knife.

Peijing found herself holding her breath again. As if her whole life depended on this moment. Ah Ma sliced down with the knife and pulled the two halves apart.

It was perfectly baked.

The yolk in the middle round and yellow.

Peijing let go and took a breath.
